By C. L. Redfield, the Distinguished Civil Engineer.

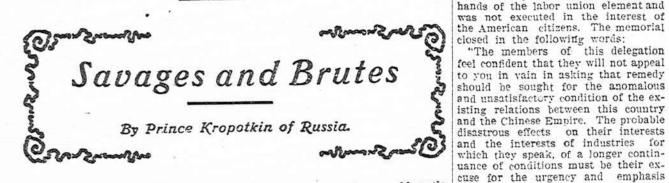

AVAGES marry savages in mere youth and other savages are born, while David was the eleventh son of his father, and David's son, Solomon, was bern when the psalmist was fiftytwo years old. Moses was born 185 wears after the birth of of his great-grandfather, while the modern Moses-Abraham Lincoln-was the product of a grandmother and grandfather each the baby of their respective families ,and of a father and a mother each the youngest child in their families. Benjamin Franklin's ancestors in the male line on the Franklin side were the youngest children for five generations back, while the father of Audubon was fifty-one years old at his boy's birth and himself was the twentyfirst child in his own family.

Looking for reckless, adventurous, dissipated, aggressive types of men. I have found extreme youth in their parentage almost without exception, while the great thinkers and philosophers of the world have been born of parents who have reached mental maturity.

No man should be allowed to marry before he is twenty-five years old, and no woman until she is twenty years at least. If no person in the United States were allowed to marry before the age of twent-five years, two generations of such marriages would wipe out virtually all the poverty, crime and viciousness of the country.

When a parent, and especially a father, has passed fifty years old, he is at the maximum of his knowledge and experience. He is inclined to morality, philosophy and a greater tolerance of the world and its vagaries. He has time for thinking and for self-analysis. Shall one doubt for a moment that a man becomes a parent at such a time in life reflects his acquired nature in

OR the practive savage, animals are mysterious, problematic beings, possessed of a wide knowledge of the things of nature. They know much more than they are ready to tell us. subject. In some way or another, by the aid of senses much more refined than ours, and by telling to each other all that they notice in their rambles and flights, they know everything for miles round. And if a man has been "just" toward them, they will warn him of a coming danger, as they warn each other; but they will take no heed of him if he has not been straightforward in his actions. Snakes and birds (the owl is a leader of the snakes), mammals and insects, lizards and fishes--all understand each other, and continually communicate their observations to one another.

Inside this vast brotherhood there are, of course, the still closer brotherhoods of beings "of one blood." The monkeys, the bears, the wolves, the elephants and the rhinoceroses, most ruminants, the hares and most of the rodents, the erccodiles, and so on, perfectly know their own kin, and they will not tolerate any one of their relatives to be slaughtered by man without taking, in one way or another, honest revenge. This conception must have had

Even now, when a savage is hunting, he is bound to respect certain rules of propriety toward the animals, and he must perform certain expiatory ceremonies after his hunt. Most of these ceremonies are rigorously enacted, even nowadays in the savage clans, especially as regards those species considered

It is well known that two men belonging to two different clans or tribes can become brothers by mixing the blood of the two, obtained from small incisions made for that purpose. But it was also quite habitual for man to enter into brotherhood with some animal. The tales continually mentioned it. An animal asks a hunter to spare it, and if the hunter accedes to the demand the two become brothers. And then the monkey, the bear, the doe, the bird, the crocodile, or the bee-any one of the sociable animals-will take all possible card of the man brother in the critical circumstances of his life, sending his or her animal brothers of different tribes to warn him or help him out of a difficulty. And if the warning comes too late, or is misunderstood, and he loses his life, they all will try to bring him back to life, and they fail they will take due revenge, just as if the man had been one of their own kin.

When I journeyed to Siberia I was often struck, without understanding it, with the care which my Tunus or Mongol guide would take not to uselessly kill any animal. The fact is that every life is respected by a savage, or rather it was before he came in contact with Europeans. If he kills an animal, it is for food or for clothing; but he does not destroy life, as the whites do. for the mere excitement of the slaughter.

Of course, there are rascals among the animals—the hyena, for instance, or the shrewmouse, or the man eating tiger; but these do not count; they are outlaws. As to the greal animal world as a whole, savage children are taught to respect it and see in it an extension of their own kin.

Concerning Municipal: Ownership Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago.

HE people at last are beginning to realize they have a vested property right in their streets and alleys, and that if the use of these streets and alleys is a valuable commodity to the corporations by the same token it is a valuable commodity to the public. However, the public service corporation is still so firmly entremethed in the possession and control of every utility worth possessing and controlling in American cities that the schemes for the rescue of the public is still in embryonic Indeed, a certain vague idea of a sanctity of rights seems to pervade the atmosphere in the average community, and the plain citizen enters upon the discussion of the ownership by the community of its own utilities with bated breath and with almost an air of being caught in a felonious attempt to subvert a divinely established order of things. A similar sensation must have been experienced in the decade before the revolution by our forefathers when first the idea of throwing off the rule of England's sovereign was whispered with bated breath.

For generations in all our cities public utilities have been in the hands of a favored few, and great families have been established and great fortunes gathered at the expense of the ordinary citizen.

In all our cities the families of the owners of the gas plant, of the street railway company, c the electric lighting company, of the telephone company and of all the other public utility companies take precedence of ordinary folk by rea on of the patent of nobility conferred along with the franchises of the

Abroad great deeds and a long line of distinguished ancestry characterfized the claim to aristocracy. With us wealth forms the keystone upon which great houses are built, and this wealth, in many instances, at least, is first founded upon some grant or franchise by which the right to taxe the people for their personal benefit was transferred from the community to an individual or group of individuals.

Prepare and mould the spinach. Have ready, also, some cold boiled egg and mayonnaise. Turn the spinach from the moulds on to nests of shredded lettuce. Dispose, chain fashion, around the base of the spinach, the whites of the eggs cut in in the brain, while red sends blood to rings, 21d press a star of mayonnaise in the centre of each ring. Pass the yolks through a sieve and sprinkle over the top of the mounds and place above this the round ends of the white.

To Banish Seasickness.

Bright red spectacles, accompanied by internal doses of calomel, form a new German specific against seasickness. It is deducted from Epstein's investigations on the influence of color on the blood-vessels in the brain. Seasiekness is due to lack of blood brain with a rush. By looking at one point for some time through the red glasses the patient is rapidly cured.

Off the vessel came a number of small boats. The native could see the crew piling what they thought were supplies into the smaller craft. Then the men pulled for the shore. During that and the next day there was heard firing of arms, and later, smoke and fire were observed This led to an investigation from Pe tropavlovski and other towns on the coast, and a horrible tale of pillage and massacre was brought to light.

About the streets of the settlement writes Morogravenlof, were strewn the bodies of 150 of the inhabitants, show and cut to pieces by the pirates, who, under the pretense of friendship, had gained a landing on the coast. Robbery was their motive, for every had had been ransacked, and anything of marketable value had been taken.
